DocuTrac, Inc. Adds Psychologist/Author to Team

Hagerstown, Maryland November 15, 2000 - DocuTrac, Inc. (DTI), software development corporation for behavioral health and makers of the QuicDoc Clinical System, announced today that Ed Nottingham, Ph.D., ABPP has joined the DTI team as Executive Director of the Enterprise Division.

The new position attests to DTI's expanding market resulting from the development of the newest technologies within the QuicDoc system. As Executive Director of the Enterprise Division, Dr. Nottingham will assist mental health agencies and hospitals, nationwide, in providing and promoting client-server, documentation solutions using QuicDoc Enterprise products.

"Being able to analyze accurate information on patient progress, as well as clinical and administrative history, especially in this climate of accountability, is critical to the livelihood of all of us who work in behavioral health," states Dr. Nottingham. Drawing from his experiences in private practice and from having served as Director of Psychological Services for a private inpatient psychiatric hospital and a partial hospitalization program, he adds, "I have seen how the method of documenting patient care can directly effect the ability to provide quality care. The way QuicDoc manages information is not only effective, but is also highly efficient and a real time saver for busy therapists. The reason it was easy for me to make the decision to join the DTI team is that I believe in the product, and I believe in the company's ability to make a difference." You can find out about QuicDoc on DTI's web site at www.quicdoc.com

President of DTI, Arnold Schuster, Ph.D., says, "Dr. Nottingham's credentials as a respected psychologist and educator coupled with his interest in computer technology makes him a perfect addition, to DTI." Dr. Nottingham is a Diplomate in Behavioral and Clinical Psychology of the American Board of Professional Psychology, and a Fellow of the American Psychological Association. He holds adjunct faculty appointments at the University of Memphis and the University of Tennessee. In its third revision, his book titled It's Not As Bad As It Seems, A Thinking Straight Approach to Happiness with a foreword by Albert Ellis, Ph.D. will soon be released. The book will be available through local bookstores.
